Yesterday was a day of mourning in the national tropolis. The announcement that the funeral of the late Postmaster General was to take place attracted all classes of our citizens to pay a last tribute of respect to his memory. In this community he had won all hearts by uniform courtesy and hospitality, and the loss of none of our public men could have occasioned a deeper or more iversal sorrow here than did the death of Aaron V Brown. At half-past nine in the morning his remains, anied by the members of the cabinet, were born from his late residence to the east room of the Executive Mansion, where they were laid out in state. The body sted in a coffin of mahogony, covered with black cloth udded with silver nalls, and trimmed with heavy silver fringe. A wreath of white flowers adorned the centre. glass lid permitted a clear view of the marble-lik features of the deceased, and a velvet pall, heavily trimmed with silver lace, falling to the floor on either side, covered the lower portion of the coffin. The coffin plate

Around the bier were placed, in an oval form, three rows of plain chairs, the mirrows were covered wih white muslin, the bright colors of the carpeting were hidden by a covering of white, the heavy curtains fell in darkening olds over the windows, and through a few panes in the centre window on the north side the sunlight entered, alling on the coffin, as if figurative of a bright immortality for him whose remains it enclosed. No change had been made in the furniture, except what we have des ribed; but the subdued light, the dark pall, the shades frown over the mirrors, and the deep silence gave the room the appearance of the interior of some grand man

At ten o'clock the doors of the White House were thrown open, and a continuous stream of mourners passed around the bier, each gazing for a while with sad and ingering looks upon the pale face of the deceased. As and the arrival of the officers of the various departments of the government contributed to swell the throng. Next came the officers of the army and navy of the United States and the diplomatic corps, and these corps and the corps are the corps and the corps are the c States and the diplomatic corps, and these were arranged on the north side of the East Room. On either side were heads of bureaus and other government officials. Other distinguished personages were appropriately grouped in various portions of the room, the clergy occupying the seats nearest to the bier.

At 12 o'clock the President of the United States, ac ompanied by Secretaries Cass, Floyd, Toucey, Cobb, Black, and the new Postmaster General, Holt, entered the room through the reception parlors, and took seats near the clergy. The Rev. Dr. Hall, of the Church of the Epiphany, and Rev. J. C. Granberry, the officiating clergyman, then took their positions at a small table in front of the coffin. Quiet having been restored, the Rev. Dr. Hall read the solemn funeral service of the Episcopal Church. In concluding, he introduced Rev. Mr. Grau berry, who addressed the assemblage as follows:

Few and simple are the words which I wish rew and simple are the words which I was to speak on this solemn occasion. Amidst the testimonials of respect and grief appropriate to the distinguished dead, I am here but as an humble ininister of the Lord Jesus, briefly to enforce those lessons of Divine wisdom with which the event so impresses us; for God speaks to man not only by the written volume, and by the living minister, but also in the events of his own providence. From try, but also in the events of his own providence. From that coffin which lies before you, the voice of God sounds forth to these of his own family who have been bereft, to those who were associated with him in places of high trust and responsibility, and also to the whole country. The first lesson we should learn is this; the things of

The first lesson we should learn is this: the things of this world passeth away—its pleasures, its distinctions are tangible. Deeply was I impressed with this fact, as when, a few nights ago, I entered the chamber of Gov. Brown, who lay upon his couch with extreme debility and torture, which could not be relieved by the skill of the physicians or the tenderest nursing of sympath sing friends. His whole household were bathed in tears, and when I thought of one week ago, how different it seem-ed—in health and vigor, surrounded by all the luxuries of life, in the midst of a happy family and a genial so-ciety, enjoying merited fame and honor from his fellow.

ciety, enjoying merited fame and honor from his fellowcitizens, from his own State, and from these United States. "Verily, all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of men as the flower of the grass; the grass withereth, and the flower fadeth and falleth away."

I do not mean to underrate the blessings of this world, and especially its honors. I know that to win the confidence, the wisdom, and the love of the people—to attain positions of honor and of power in the country by eminent talent, character, and service—are worthy objects to fire ambition, and an appropriate reward of merit.
They are valuable and should be desired and sought after; and yet, if man considers them as his highest good, how vain the thought. Vi.cue, piety, favor of God, and the hope of immortality—these constitute the treasure that does not corrupt, and the glory that does treasure that does not corrupt, and the glory that does and the joys of this world, renembering the taxt: but another lesson God would teach us—that, as citizens of this country, we must depend upon Him, and not place our trust in man. And it is in the knowledge of every one that Gov. Brown has been snatched away from hi post at the very time when his services were most need-ed—when an exigency had occurred in his own depart-ment of the government, and when an able assistant had Thus it is God visits us in the midst of ou plans, and disappoints our hopes and wishes, so as to teach us this great fact : that vain is the confidence that s put in mere man, whatever his talents, his experience or his judgment. Well will it be for us if, instead of merely supplying his place with a worthy substitute, transferring to another man our trust, we shall learn to look unto and to believe that in His favor alone is true prosperity.

But, let me mention, moreover, especially to the great men of the land, so many of whom are present on this occasion, what important responsibility tests upon you. I do not allude to the discharge of your official duties, which I know are weighty; but that influence which you must exert upon your fellow-citizens, because of the high place which you come. must exert upon your fellow-citizens, because of the high place which you occupy. Witness this case; look at your newspapers throughout the extent of this wast land— among all our multifatious population the news has gone that Gov. Brown is dead, and a whole nation is uni-ted in sympathy, and the insignia of mourning is every-where displayed; it is only one illustration of the fact that, by the eminent position which men hold in this country, they have a hold upon their regard and upon their affections. It is right, it is commendable, that re-lied thick we also men in his coefficient reshell which me place upon men in high position men who, by their talents and their service to their country have wen their way to these places of rank and power. This kind of regard is certainly desirable and should be commended, but unfortunate will it be for our coun-try when our fellow-citizens lose that sentiment—and what a responsibility it devolves upon you. The young men of this land that crowd to this city—men of impres-sible characters, men of intelligence, men of influence, men of ambition, who are seeking introduction into sosentissants, they learn your ways, and thus return to their various homes carrying with them the sentiments and habits they have formed in this city. Not only so, the serious pour habits, are known and smiled unrughout this tentre pane. It is in your power, the cycle the country with all deas of hollor, gencreatity in high life, irreligion, insidelity, and immorality, to make almost vice and crime respectable among the property of the other hand, you can teach men below you in rank that the noblest title to the respect and cates of men consists in truthfuluess of character, in side integrity, in purity, and in sobriety, above all irreligion.

I am have

I am have you to be able to say that, to the best informs tion I can gain—that of the unanimous testimony, I may say—that he whose death we this day meurn, who has so long a time occupied a conscieuous position in the world, before his country, ever set an example of Thiegarity, of points, occumentousness, of respect for religion, as well as the laws of the country. Would to the local local also say an example of personal plety; but it years who occupy lofty stations would not only lend year and in favor of morality and truth, but also of the religion of thrist, what a holy and powerful influence would go forth to this country. But recollect, you, too, must die, and God is speaking to you from that corpse there die, and doe is speaking to you to solemn words:

"He ye, therefore, ready also; for at such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

Death snatches away the high and the low, the rich and the poor; it takes men in the midst of their busiest hours, in the midst of their pressing engagements, when they are needed by the country, when they are needed by their family, when most important claims are under way—just then death comes and takes them. Why! In order to impress upon the living this great truth: Nothing secures you from death; it will not do for you to say I have more important business to attend to now; it will not do for you to wait until your public career is over before attending to this great subject—the salvation of your immortal soul.

it will not do for you to wait until your public career is over before attending to this great subject—the salvation of your immortal soul.

I wish only to add a single word with respect to the only interview which I had with Gov. Brown. As to his private character, you were better acquainted with it than myself; as to his public life, you are certainly as familiar with it as I. I was called upon on Monday night to visit him for the only time. I found him extremely low, and, for the most part, his mind was wandering, but there was an occasional glimpee of intelligence, and the only significant thing which I observed in that brief interview, I wish to mention.

He evidently recognised me as a minister, and desired I should pray for him; and when I endeavored briefly to point him to the mercy of God, in Christ Jesus, and bade him ask for that, and rely upon it that God would surely grant it, and when I told his wife in her grief that she must look to God, who doeth all things well, and to believe in this ber deep affliction He was acting wisely and mercifully, he took her by the hand, turning his dying eyes towards her, and evidently saying, "Take that home to yourself, and apply the lesson to your conduct for your family."

The preacher then concluded by commending the

A very large number of carriages had been provided, and the funeral, as it passed down the avenue, was probably the longest ever seen in Washington. The bells of most of the churches tolled solemnly, and minute gun were fired from the Arsenal. All the public buildings and quite a number of the stores on the avenue were draped with black, and from the top of the Capitol and other prominent points the national ensign floated at half mast. The streets and windows along the line of the procession were thronged with spectators. The funeral having reached its destination, the Congressional Burial Ground, the body was placed in a vault, and the religious services were concluded by Rev. Dr. Hall. We understand that, in the course of a few weeks, the remains will be carried to Tennessee, where their final interment is to take place.

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT.-The inhabitants of Wayne township, Montgomery county, Ohio, have taken the lead in stirring up the slumbering patriotism of the country. Whilst Congress has been rechartering the Washington Monument Society, quite important in itself, they have been holding meetings and adopting resolutions which, if faithfully carried out, will secure the ac complishment, at no distant day, of the object so dear to every lover of the "Father of his Country." They propose that contributions be received for a period of three months at every election precinct throughout the United States by a responsible person, and that every popular lecturer be solicited to devote the proceeds of one lecture to this noble object. We are satisfied that this plan will be universally acted upon, and we feel confident soon to be able to make the cheering announcement that the depleted treasury of the Society is being replenished. In view of these encouraging circumstances, it would be well, now that they have nothing further to embarrass them, for the newly-constituted board of managers to commence their labors in earnest,

THE COURTS.-The Supreme, Circuit, and Criminal Courts, and the Court of Claims did not sit yesterday, having adjourned till to-day in respect to the late Postmaster General Brown.

D. M. CARTER, esq., of this city, is announced to de liver the literary address at the commencement of the Wayne Female College at Goldsboro', North Carolina.

A FAIR for the benefit of the St. Joseph's Male Orphan Asylum will open on Tuesday next at the Assembly Rooms, Louisiana avenue, near Sixth street.

COMPILED AND EDITED BY NICHOLAS TRUBNER.

THIS Work, it is believed, is the first attempt to marshal the Literature of the United States of America during the last forty years, according to the generally-received Bhilagraphic pat Canons. The Literature will welcause it, no doubt, as a compation volume to Rivingt, Lownoles, and Elbert, whilst to the booksciler is will be a fithing quide to the American branch of Sogilah Literature—a branch which, on account of its rayid increase and riving importance, begins to force it elf dally more and more upon his attention. Nor will the work be of less interest to the man of letters, inasmach as it comprises complete tables of contents to all the more prominent editectors of the Americans, to the Journals, Memoirs, Proceedings, and transactions of their leavings of American scientific activity hitherts had imported the second of the Americans activity in the property gluows and interested in Europe.

The ministers of the crown had announced in Parliament that they had special reason to hope that the Austrian and French troops would soon be withdrawn from Rome. These facts indicated that peace would continue, notwithstanding the currency of warlike rumors.

The Paris Pourse advanced 1 per cent, which was subsequently nearly all lost.

The Atlantic Telegraph Company had held a general meeting, at which it was sunounced that the British government had tendered a guarantee of 8 per cent, on £800,000 on certain conditions which had not transpired.

The government had also granted a subsidy of £300,000 per voyage to the Galway and Halifax line of steamers. Lord Lyons sailed for New York on the 22d uit. [SECOND DESPATCH.]

Attention had been called in the House of Commons to the seizare by the Portuguese of a British ship on the coast of Mozambique, and explanations were asked from the government. The latter replied that explanations had been demanded of Portugal. Sir Charles Napier men had been demanded of Portugal. Sir Charles Napier men-tioned the fact that a few nights ago a French ship-of-war anchored off Spithcad, departing before morning, and asked if the Admiralty were cognizant of the fact, and also if it was done for the purpose of taking soundings. Sir S. Packington replied affirmatively, but knew nothing of the purpose. There was nothing vanual in the fact. Leave was given to bring in a bill abolishing all dis-tinctions between the Parliamentary caths of Protestants and Catholics.

and Catholics.

In the House of Lords, Lord Malmsbury raid the gov ernment was led to believe that at no very distant period the Austrian and French troops would evacuate the Ro-man States at the request of the Papal government. In the House of Commons, Lord Palmerston called attention to the state of Europe, with a view of asking whether to the state of Europe, with a view of asking whether the government were in a position to make any declara-tion that peace would probably remain unintercupt-ed. Mr. D'Israeli expressed the conviction that the great Powers had no wish to disturb the settl ment of 1815, although there were circumstances touching Italy calculated to excite apprehensions. He although the the reverset of an execution of the Roman States by the the prospect of an evacuation of the Roman States by the French and Austrian troops, and to Lord Ewley's (?) conciliatory mission to Vienna, and closed by appealing to the House to postpone a discussion, and trust to the efforts of the government to preserve peace. Sir S. Packington then brought forward the navy estimates, on which a general debate ensued. During this debate Sir Charles Napier asserted that France had command of the British charmel; but this Lord Packington denied. The number of men esked for was promptly granted.

France.—Rumors continued warlike, but Lord Cowley's mission had increased the hopes of peace. The Paris correspondent of the London Herald says that war is so far resolved upon that the corps to commence the campaign have been designated, and orders given to Minister of War to prepare a plan of operations. It was said that the representatives of foreign courts in Paris had abandoned all hope of a pacific solution. It is reported that orders to mesoare for the campaign in Italy were that orders to prepare for the campaign in Italy were given by the Emperor immediately after his return from

These are the only preparations exported in any quantity to Europe We also would call attention to the fact that we have always avoid all chartatanism. Our preparations are the highest priced, but the cheapest, because they last longer, and do more good, the expense, in the end, less than others. We aspire to have the best, not the lowest priced. One bottle of Rectorer will last nearly a year. $1.50 per bottle. Balsam, 375¢ cents per bottle.

Address all letters for information, &c., to "Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Rectorer Depot, No. 355 Broome Street, New York." The Gaussine has "Mrs. S. A. Allen's signed in Red Ink to outside wrappers, and in Black Ink to directions pasted on bottles. Resioner bottles are of dark purple glass, with the words, "Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer, 355 Broome Street, New York," thewn on them. The balsam bottles are of groen glass, with "Mrs. $1.4. Allen's World's Hair Balsam, 355 Broome Street, New York," blown on them. Circulars around bottles are ofgroen glass, with "Mrs. $1.4. Allen's World's Hair Balsam, 355 Broome Street, New York," blown on them. Circulars around bottles are offered, None other is genuine. Signing the name by others is forgery, and will be prosecuted by us as a criminal offence.

Some dealers try to sell other preparations instead of these, on which they make more profit; insist on these.

Sold by nearly every drug and fancy goods dealer.
